Hidden beneath the busy streets of Covent Garden, London’s largest wine bar has opened its doors to the public. Courtyard Wine Cellars, located at 17B and 18B The Marketplace, is quickly becoming a destination for wine lovers in the city. The venue occupies seven arched cellars that date back to the 1830s, offering a unique blend of history and modern hospitality.

The wine bar seats up to 100 guests and features an extensive collection of wines. With a selection of 1,000 bottles from 100 regions across 10 countries, Courtyard Wine Cellars aims to cater to a wide range of tastes. The shelves are lined with bottles from both well-known and emerging producers, making it possible for visitors to discover new favorites or enjoy classic labels.

The atmosphere inside Courtyard Wine Cellars is designed to be welcoming and comfortable. Candlelight and carefully arranged seating create a cozy environment, while the original brickwork and arches add character. Guests can choose from various nooks throughout the space, allowing for both intimate gatherings and larger groups.

A team of knowledgeable staff is available to guide guests through the wine list. They offer recommendations based on individual preferences and are prepared to answer questions about regions, varietals, and food pairings. In addition to wine by the glass or bottle, Courtyard Wine Cellars serves seasonal sharing plates and charcuterie boards. These dishes are intended to complement the wines and provide sustenance during long evenings spent sampling different selections.

For those interested in taking a piece of the experience home, there is also a retail section within the bar. Visitors can browse the shelves and purchase bottles to enjoy later. This feature appeals to both tourists looking for souvenirs and locals seeking something special for their own collections.

Despite its location just below one of London’s busiest tourist areas, Courtyard Wine Cellars offers a sense of escape from the crowds above. Some seats even provide views of Covent Garden’s famous street performers through small windows or open arches, blending the energy of the market with the calm of the cellar.

Since opening earlier this year, Courtyard Wine Cellars has attracted attention for its size, selection, and setting. The combination of historical architecture and modern amenities has made it a notable addition to London’s wine scene. As word spreads among locals and visitors alike, it is expected to become a regular stop for those seeking quality wine in an atmospheric setting.

Courtyard Wine Cellars is open daily, with hours extending into the evening to accommodate after-work gatherings and late-night tastings. Reservations are recommended during peak times but walk-ins are welcome when space allows. The management encourages guests to explore both familiar favorites and new discoveries from their diverse list.

The opening of Courtyard Wine Cellars reflects London’s ongoing interest in wine culture and its willingness to embrace new venues that offer both variety and expertise. As more people seek out unique experiences in historic settings, places like this are likely to play an important role in shaping how residents and tourists enjoy food and drink in the city.
